Guest Submissions Terms & Conditions

Updated March 11, 2020

Thank you for your interest in contributing an opinion piece, news/feature story or idea for a post on the IV Words blog! Here are terms and conditions to which you, as a guest author, must agree.

- IV Words reserves the right to publish or decline any submission for any reason.
- IV Words reserves the right to edit submitted materials for content, length, style or any other reason. However, the goal is to present a piece that both you, as the guest author, and IV Words, as the editor and publisher, will be proud to claim. Therefore, IV Words agrees to share any significant edits with guest authors in advance of publication and abide by their wishes regarding whether to move forward with a post.
- Post authors grant IV Words the right to publish their posts and references to their posts on the IV Words blog, on the IV Words Facebook page, Twitter account and any other IV Words-operated social media accounts. IV Words will credit the guest author in each instance.
- All publications of the post, either on paper or electronically, will include credit to IV Words as the forum where the post was first published.
- IV Words encourages post authors and the organizations they represent to share the posts far and wide, either from IV Words-operated social media accounts or by using a link to the original post.

By clicking on the “Submit” button on the “Submit Content / Ideas” page of this website, you agree to these terms and conditions.
